President and General Manager of Transmission Systems, BorgWarner Inc.

Martin Fischer is president and general manager of BorgWarner Transmission Systems. In this role, Fischer oversees BorgWarner's global transmission systems business, which includes 18 sites across the globe.

Prior to this position, Fischer was vice president and general manager of Europe and South America for BorgWarner Turbo Systems, where he managed the company's turbocharger business in those regions.

Before joining BorgWarner in 2014, Fischer held several executive positions at Hella, including president of Hella Corporate Center USA, Inc., president and CEO of Hella Electronics Corp., and executive vice president of quality at Hella KGaA Hueck&Co. Previously, he held leadership positions at Siemens VDO Automotive.

Fischer holds a doctorate in electrical engineering from Technical University Darmstadt in Darmstadt, Germany; and master's degree in electrical engineering from TU Darmstadt and University of California at Berkeley. He is a member of the CTI Symposium's advisory board and received an Automotive News Europe Rising Stars Award in 2016.
